TWIMC:

I dislike reading long recommendation letters so I refuse to write one.

Not sure what type of position Wayne is pursuing but I assure you he is qualified for damn near everything. Except maybe healthcare and I bet he could fake that for a year or two successfully :)

Wayne has the uncanny ability to stand at the beginning of a corn maze and instinctively know what path to take to get to the end successfully. He can do the same with any type of situation especially software projects. He just knows how to get from point A to point B --- which is the secret to his success.

And success for Wayne is NOT achieving what is expected. He would call that a failure. He always surprises with far more of a deliverable than what the world around him is expecting.

He is always there when you need him. And sleep is only an option is that's what it takes to make the right thing happen.

He plays well with others in spite of his mediocre jokes (okay -- some of them are funny)

His business acumen is always front and center as he evaluates technical and strategic options.

He would be part of Fidlar, he has saved my ass a few times in the past, but he wants my job and that ain't happening.

With Wayne - no matter what - it always gets done. Whatever that may be.

Hire him - but no matter what, no matter what he says - do not go to Mexico with him.
